

Lieutenant-Commander Albert Cushing Read, the transatlantic flier, photographed shortly after his triumphant return to this country.

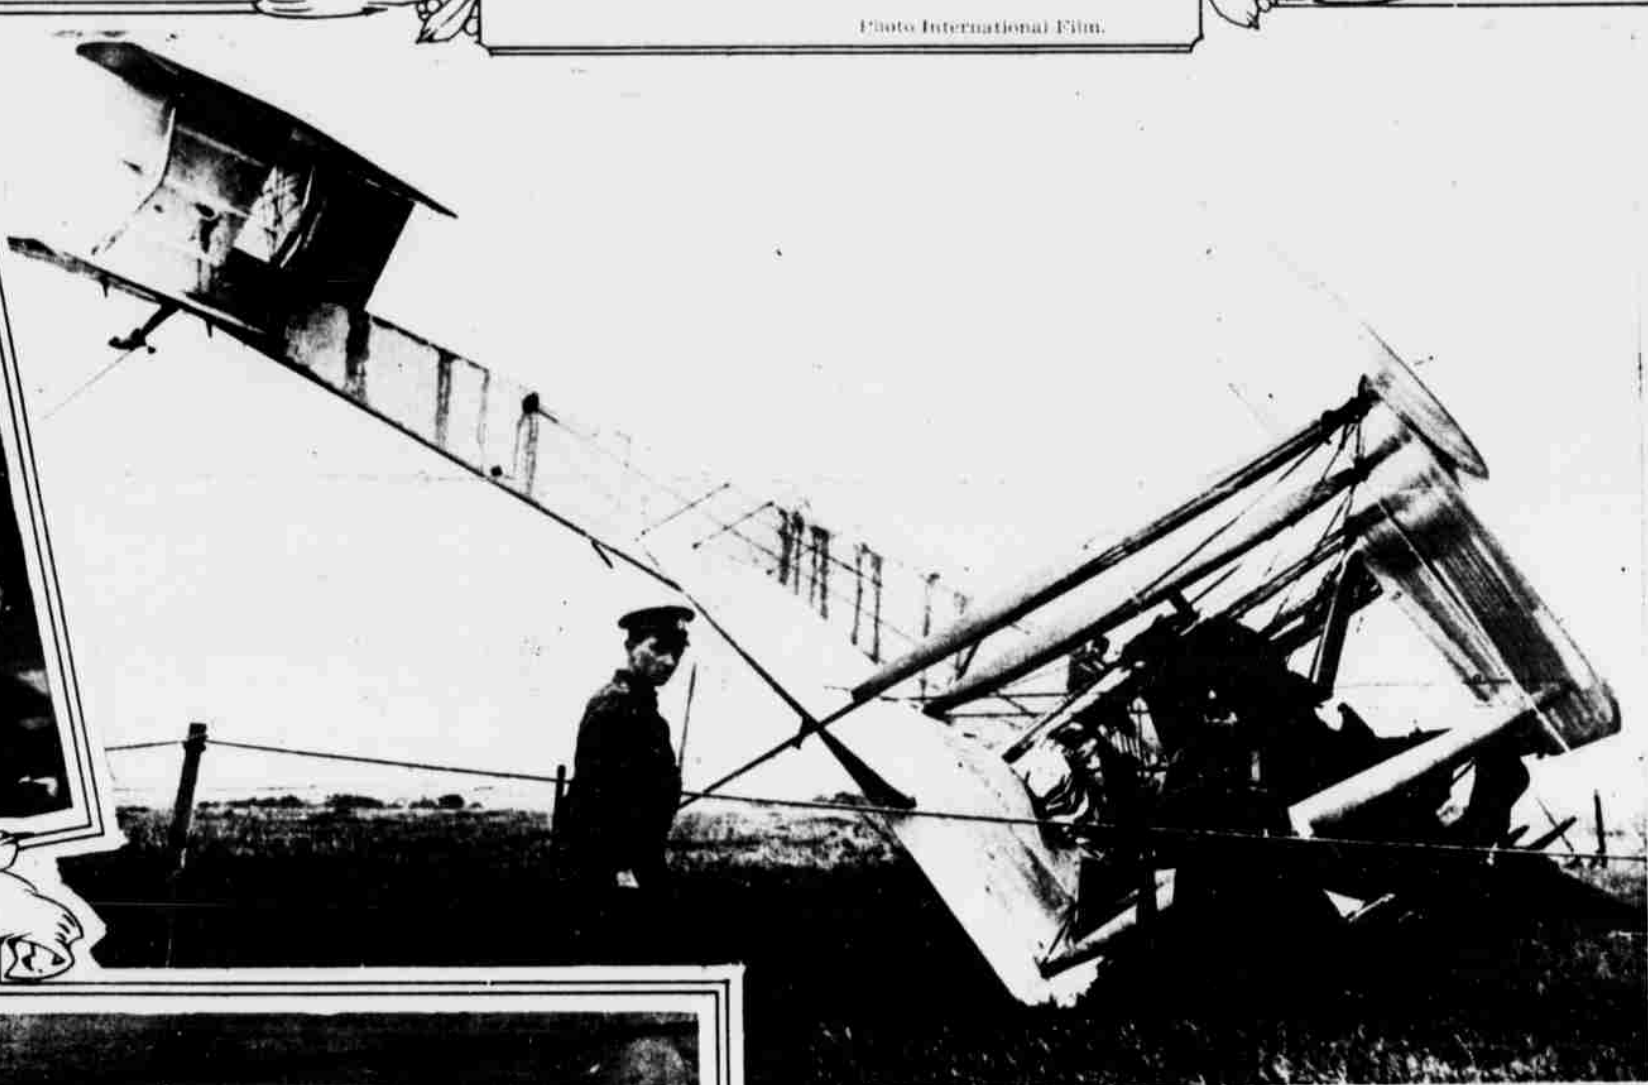

First pictures of Capt. Alcock (left) and Lieut. Brown in Ireland after their non-stop flight from America in a Vickers-Vimy plane.

Photo International Film.

Rear-Admiral Glennon greeting and congratulating the NC commanders and crews as they arrived at Hoboken on the transport Zeppelin.

A closeup of Alcock's plane as it landed at Derrygeeleagh bog, Clifden, Ireland, close to the Marconi wireless station, after a non-stop flight from Newfoundland of more than 1,900 miles. The nose was smashed and the machine otherwise badly damaged.

Photo by International Film.

The wives of the NC fliers on the dock to greet them. From left to right they are Mrs. J. L. Breese, Jr., and her daughter Frances; Mrs. John H. Towers, Mrs. P. N. Bellinger, Mrs. Albert Cushing Read, Mrs. Montfort, Mrs. Walter Hinton, Mrs. Talbott and Mrs. H. C. Richardson and her daughter. Naturally they were all happy beyond expression at the safe return of the men who started on the hazardous overseas flight.

Copyright, Western Newspaper Union.

American students of Trinity College, Dublin, giving a riotous welcome to Alcock and Brown upon their arrival at Dublin.

Photo by International Film Service.